THE ROBB HOUSE

William Robb came to Markham in 1838 from Lanarkshire, Scotland. He settled on Lot 2, Concession 8, with his first wife, Jane Telfer, in a hamlet to be later known as Armadale. The handsome coursed stone structure known as The Robb House was built in 1853 for William Robb's second wife, Maria Daniels.

The Robb House is an excellent example of the early Georgian Cottage Style, and is constructed of a stone material that is not typical of Markham architecture. The sturdy construction has ensured the retention of its original doors, windows, shutters, storms, chimneys, lintels and quoins.
