SCHEDULE "A"

Historical Designations

1. Trinity United Church - 140 Maple Street

The Maple Street Methodist Church was constructed in 1863 following a fire that consumed the original frame structure. Built from local materials in a typical Methodist design the sanctuary served as a religious and social facility for many of our early pioneers. Records indicate that Wesleyan Methodists organized the first religious facility in the early history of our Town. Their commitment in 1863 and later expansions in 1893, 1929 and 1958 have solidified this religious mark. In 1925 Methodists, Presbyterians and other small denominations joined to create the United Church of Canada. Trinity United has a tremendous tradition in this community and deserves the historical designation on its edifice.

2. Hamilton Block - Nos. 137, 139 & 141 Hurontario Street

Constructed in 1897 by W. A. Hamilton, Collingwood Postmaster, this building housed the Federal Post Office from 1897 until the current federal building was completed during World War One. Designed by renowned architect F. T. Hodgson, the construction materials included deep red pressed brick trimmed with Duntroon Freestone. It was Mr. Hodgson's intention to design an interim Postal facility which allowed for easy first storey alteration when the federal government recognized the need for a new publically owned facility. Upon completion it was regarded as a substantial looking structure, neat though not gaudy, which allowed the Postal facility to command a main street posture. This building is indeed worthy of historical designation.
