Reasons for the Proposed Designation:

Erected by the Grand Trunk Railway in 1913 and opened in August, 1914, the stationhouse remains an important port of entry to Stratford. The building is influenced by the Prairie Style School which was led by American architect, Frank Lloyd Wright. The Prairie Style was known for its sprawling buildings, low pitched roofs and horizontal lines. The designation will include the exterior of the whole structure, including tower (now missing), roof, masonry, windows, original doors, and brick platform (now covered).
