REASON FOR DESIGNATION:

The main south facade is unusual in that the brickwork is in flemish bond. Both north and south walls are surmounted by a decorative brick cornice with returns at the gables. Windows, still with original six over six sash and shutters, and the door openings exhibit brick flat arches and dressed stone sills.

Donald Campbell purchased the property from John Chisholm in 1856. The house was constructed in 1857. Campbell was previously a soldier with The Argyle and Sutherland Highlanders and settled in Oakville after his discharge in 1842.
